Comments:

The rule requiring bank statements ect., would be unduly burdensome. This would creat more costs for the vast majority of debtors who have nothing. It also creates more storage costs (or labor costs in scanning). It seems like an unnecessary layer of paper and work for everyone when only a few debtors have any assets worth looking at. The debtors with assets can be spotted with asset checks, now done very cheaply on the internet. Energy would be best spent by focusing on these cases rather than raising the level of "make work" on all cases.
